MISSING PACKAGES.

ENQUIRIES are still continually made to me for packages which have not reached the hands of the consignees, I am only too willing to help the public in any way I can but I must point out that on the 1st January last all handling of cargo, until it reaches the consignee or his agent, passed into the hands of the Steamers Agents and it is to them therefore or the Mombasa clearing agents to whom consignees should apply. In addition to the Ship's Manifest and the tallies the Steamship Agents have a record of all packages handed over to the Customs for Want of Entry 21 days after landing.

Passengers are strongly advised to look after their baggage themselves or to give their clearing agents full particulars of number and description of the various pieces. Every effort is made by the Customs Department to safeguard property in the Baggage Room but with the mass of baggage usually to be dealt with no guarantee can be given that baggage will not in some instances be mixed and that pieces belonging to a passenger may be inadvertently or deliberately taken away by another passenger or person representing himself to be a passenger.
