GENERAL NOTICE No. 386.

LOCUST REPORT UP TO MARCH 27th, 1929.

Flying locusts have been and are now reported from practically all districts in Kenya. They occur in the Nandi, Trans Nzoia, Plateau, the Nakuru District, about Nairobi, below Nyeri, on the Aberdares, on Mount Kenya, about Voi, and are entering Kenya from Tanganyika daily.

Tanganyika reports that the vast majority of swarms in that territory turned northwards over a week ago and at the time of writing, it is apparent that the rains are driving the locusts rapidly northwards. No egg-laying is reported from Tanganyika, although a few swarms seen there are reaching maturity, and from Voi it is reported that a proportion of each swarm is reaching the yellow stage.

On the whole, locusts in those territories are within three or four weeks of laying and are present in very great numbers. Rain and cold damp winds make them move away rapidly if they are on the wing. If not flying, the insects crowd closely into bushes and trees and even densely on grass land. As they are unable to fly well if wet, the swarms do not usually move until rain has passed and they are fit to resume flight.

The white stork is found in considerable numbers; when resting on the ground they look, at a distance, like large flocks of sheep.

It is observed that swarms about Mount Kenya are flying high up the mountain; it is now known that in 1908 large numbers of locusts were seen dead about and below the snowline on that mountain.

As swarms become unmobilised due to weather conditions, their destruction by means of flame throwers will again be attempted, although the cost of the fuel used is abnormally high in this Colony.

It is regrettable that the onset of the rains in Tanganyika should have again been late this year as locusts would have been driven out of that territory in a younger stage, and consequently would have moved northwards two weeks ago. Should very heavy and continuous rain fall in the Colony with a very wide and simultaneous distribution, most swarms will be driven far afield, but if patchy rains fall such as we have experienced during the past few years, locusts will no doubt remain well within the Colony and will lay again.

E. HARRISON,
Deputy Director of Agriculture.
