The General Loan and Inscribed Stock Ordinance (Chapter 46) is out of date and defective in certain respects. It is desirable to replace it by an Ordinance on the lines of a model supplied by the Secretary of State

This Bill will accordingly repeal and replace the General Loan and Inscribed Stock Ordinance. The principal departures from the provisions of the previous Ordinance are indicated below

The Colonial Stock Act, 1948, of the United Kingdom was enacted long after the General Loan and Inscribed Stock Ordinance came into effect. That Act enables stock to which the Colonial Stock Act, 1877, applies, to be transferred merely by an instrument in writing instead of by inscription, provided that the law of the dominion, colony or territory of whose debts the stock forms part allows regulations to be made providing for the transfer of stock in that manner. This Bill, accordingly, contains in Clause 39 a provision authorizing the making of such regulations. Since stock will no longer be transferred by inscription reference to "inscribed" stock in the previous Ordinance is no longer appropriate and has accordingly been deleted

Clauses 14 and 28 replace respectively sections 14 and 28 of the previous Ordinance and, in addition, provide that—

- (a) the first and each subsequent appropriation of money for the formation of a sinking fund shall be made on the date specified in the terms of issue of the loan as that on which the first contribution to the sinking fund shall be taken, and
- (b) stock issued in exchange for debentures shall be included in reckoning the total nominal amount of the stock

The new Clauses also contain provision whereby if the trustees of any sinking fund of a loan issued under the Ordinance are satisfied that the value of the fund will be sufficient with further accumulations of interest, but without further payment of contributions, to enable the loan to be redeemed not later than the final redemption date, the Governor may, with the approval of the Secretary of State, suspend further contributions. Provision is made, however for contributions to be recommenced if the trustees at any time inform the Governor that this is necessary

Section 26 of the previous Ordinance imposed an obligation to redeem the entire loan on the specific date of maturity. Clause 26 of the Bill will give an option to redeem at an earlier date

Clause 29 replaces section 29 of the previous Ordinance and will enable the Crown Agents to place money at interest as an alternative to investment

Clause 32 replaces section 32 of the previous Ordinance and makes it clear that stock may be created and sold for the purpose of raising money for redeeming outstanding loans whether issued before or after the commencement of this new Ordinance

Clause 37 replaces section 37 of the previous Ordinance and enables the Crown Agents to make arrangements for registering stock in their books, for issuing certificates of title in respect of stock and for effecting the exchange or conversion of inscribed stock into registered stock

It is not expected that any additional expenditure of public moneys will be incurred if the provisions of this Bill become law
