GAZETTE NOTICE No. 1024

THE INDUSTRIAL COURT

CAUSE No. 94 OF 1993

BETWEEN

Parties:

Kenya Airline Pilots (Claimants)

AND

Kenya Airline Pilots Association (Claimants)

Issue in dispute:

Notification to declare fifteen (15) Flight Engineers redundant.

Geoff O'rao-Obura, advocate for the claimants.

Maxwell M. Ombogo, advocate for the respondents.

AWARD

The Notification of Dispute, Form "A", dated 17th August, 1993, was duly raised by the parties under section 14 (7) of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, Laws of Kenya (hereinafter called the "Act"); and the same, together with the statutory certificates from the Labour Commissioner and the Minister for Labour and Manpower Development in accordance with section 14 (9) (e) and (f) of the Act, were received by the court on 1st September, 1993. The dispute was then listed for mention on 15th September, 1993, when the court ordered as follows:

In view of the dismissals of the grievants (flight engineers) after the court had taken cognizance of the redundancy dispute on 1st September, 1993, and the essential nature of the industry, it is ordered that:

- (a) The claimants' preliminary applications be stayed.
- (b) The parties maintain the status quo as at the above-mentioned date, i.e. 1st September, 1993, until the redundancy dispute is fully heard and determined.
- (c) The claimants do submit their memorandum on or before 21st September, 1993.
- (d) The respondents file their replying written statement thereto on or before 28th September, 1993.
- (e) The dispute be heard on 7th and 8th October, 1993.
- (f) The award be given or delivered soon thereafter.

The claimants belatedly submitted their memorandum on 24th September, 1993, to which the respondents filed their reply statement on 5th October, 1993. The parties were heard on 7th, 18th, 27th and 28th October, 22nd and 30th November, and 2nd November, 1993.

This dispute is brought to this court by the parties to consider the legality of the notification by the respondents seeking permission to declare the services of the following flight engineers (hereinafter called "the grievants") redundant under clause 40 of the parties' collective agreement.

For the purposes of the record, there were fifteen (15) grievants at the time respondents notified the Minister for Labour and Manpower Development on 8th April, 1992, that they intended to declare the grievants redundant, but Mr. Patel has since died and is, therefore, not a party to these proceedings.

Clause 40 of the parties' collective agreement reads:

"40 Redundancy:

- (a) This shall be as defined in the current Regulations of Wages General Order, Labour Laws of Kenya.
- (b) In the event of any redundancy, the company will whenever possible, give consideration to offering alternative ground duties to the affected employees.
- (c) An employee declared redundant shall receive—
 - (i) six (6) months written notice or six (6) months salary and fixed allowances in lieu of notice;

- (ii) severance pay at the rate of fifteen (15) days pay including fixed allowances for each completed year of service up to a maximum of six (6) months' pay;
 - (iii) payment of salary and fixed allowances up to the effective date of redundancy;
 - (iv) prorated leave up to the last working day;
 - (v) full provident fund benefits in accordance with Staff Provident Fund Rules;
 - (vi) air passages on company routes for the employee and his spouse, children and freight entitlement up to 1,000 kg. in accordance with Staff Travel Regulations. These privileges should be utilized within ninety (90) days from the date of redundancy. However, if after the stipulated ninety (90) days the employee is unable to utilize the privilege, he may request for an extension which would be considered at the company's discretion;
 - (vii) rebated travel entitlement for himself, spouse and children in accordance with the Staff Travel Rules.
- (d) Prior to the expiry of the period of notice as indicated in clause (c) (i) above, the redundant employee will be given the following, at the company's expense, and as arranged by the company:
- (i) Instrument rating renewal if he is a pilot.
 - (ii) A full and valid annual check if he is a flight engineer.
- (e) An employee who has been declared redundant and who obtains other employment before the expiry of the six (6) months' notice, shall be permitted to leave the services of the company at any time, provided that an employee so leaving shall not be entitled to any salary and allowances for the unexpired portion of the six (6) months' notice.

Voluminous correspondence, most of which are irrelevant between the parties and the minutes of various meetings on the matter are annexed to the parties' respective submissions and also placed on the record by the parties as evidence of their attempt to settle the matter at their own level, but no compromise was reached. As stated hereinabove, the respondents, therefore, notified the Minister for Labour and Manpower Development on 8th April, 1992, that they intended to declare the grievants redundant. The Minister appointed Mr. I. B. Kirigua of the Ministry Headquarters to act as the investigator, and on 4th August, 1993, he (the Minister) released his report to the parties in which he recommended that conversion training for flight engineers at the age of 42 and below be offered by the airline and that all other flight engineers be paid their redundancy benefits in accordance with the collective agreement between the parties. The respondents accepted the recommendation but the claimants rejected it. Hence, this dispute for adjudication and determination. The respondents were incorporated as the national airline parastatal after the collapse of the East African Community, and until 1991, the respondents had, as the main carrier in their fleet, two and one B. 707 and 720, respectively, and one leased DC 8-71 aircraft, with flight crew consisting of two pilots and one flight engineer. There were 19 flight engineers as part of the crew. But as a result of automation and mechanization between 1985 and 1990, the Boeing B. 707 and 720 were grounded in February, 1991, and put out to tender for sale and in September, 1991, the DC 8-71 was returned to its owners. The aforementioned aging, fuel inefficient, high maintenance cost and noisy fleet of B. 707 and B. 720 aircraft were replaced with modern A. 330-300, B. 757-200 and E50 aircraft, with a view to making the respondents' operations more competitive and profitable. Presently, the respondents operate a fleet of three A. 310-300, two B. 737-300 and three F50 aircraft which require only a two man crew of pilots. In the circumstances, the skills of the grievants were rendered obsolete, and are no longer required in the respondents' concern.

In the interest of justice in this case, we would confine ourselves only to the adjudication and determination of the redundancy dispute which appear in the Notification of Dispute, Form "A", to the court, and in the circumstances, we do not consider it proper to include and discuss in this award the subsequent dismissal of the grievants because it did not form the subject-matter of the dispute at hand. With these preliminary remarks, we now proceed to consider the submissions of the parties respectively.

Briefly, the claimants submitted that as a result of the automation and mechanization of the respondents' fleet, the respondents undertook to convert and train the grievants as pilots with effect from 1985. Consequently, the Seniority and Qualifications Committee met and decided to slot them in the pilots seniority list, based on 30 per cent rating for the years they had served as flight engineers. The initial part of the conversion training was to be undertaken locally by the grievants when off duty; and upon application by each grievant, the respondents undertook to provide the funds thereof. The training was, however, shelved for a comprehensive training programme at the Flight Safety International School in Florida, U.S.A. The programme was delayed and in July, 1990, the management recommended to the Board of Directors that the training should cover the grievants up to the age of 42 years old, and a "golden handshake" should, over and above the stipulated redundancy package, be paid to those over 42 years old. In view of the recommendation, the Board of Directors directed the management in September, 1990, to commence the conversion training programme, but this was not done. Some of the grievants were sent on leave, but the claimants viewed this as a lock-out. On 21st August, 1991, the respondents informed the claimants that they no longer required the services of the grievants and the only option was to declare them redundant. The claimants insisted on the conversion training of the grievants because of a shortage of pilots in the airline as evidenced by the accumulated leave due to pilots. But the respondents offered conversion training to those grievants who were 40 years and below, and redeployment to ground duties to others. The claimants insisted that redeployment would only be acceptable to them if the grievants were allowed to retain their take-home pay, and a "golden handshake" for those who would be affected by the redundancy as compensation for breach of promise to conversion training.

The claimants contended that the respondents were aware that in 1985, they had in their establishment some aviation engineering professionals, i.e. the grievants, whose ages ranged between 31 and 42 years old; that these professionals were at the prime of their life, and that their jobs were threatened by technological changes in the industry and on recognizing the resourcefulness of the grievants, the respondents gave them hope and encouragement by agreeing to send them for conversion training programme in the U.S.A. But they dishonoured their promise to train the grievants below 40 years as pilots. Moreover, the respondents have since recruited over sixty (60) pilots from the open market on the advice of a British consultancy firm, Messrs. Speedwing Consultants, and yet they could not train the grievants who had been rated at 30 per cent as pilots. The purported redundancy was, therefore, a sham; and such conduct on the part of the respondents was wanting and a clear demonstration of lack of foresight and management excellence. The claimants maintained that the respondents still require some pilots, given the fact that the existing pilots are overworked and with excessive flying periods of over twelve (12) hours, and are owed an accumulated leave average of 130 days. They accused Messrs. Speedwing Consultants for showing a deliberate dislike towards the long serving personnel of the airline, of whom the grievants form part. The claimants, therefore, viewed the refusal by the respondents to train the grievants as pilots as a deliberate attempt to stifle, if not eradicate, local professional resources who can manage the airline.

The claimants went on to contend that training of pilots was the responsibility of the respondents just as staff development is the responsibility of any employer. In any case, piloting is a specialized profession which calls for integrity, dedication and perfection. It involves risk taking and guaranteeing the safety of passengers on board the aircraft. In fact, the success of any airline depends largely on the quantity of its pilots, e.g. Lufthansa and British Airways use the experience of their pilots as a tool of advertising the airline. Training of pilots and improvement of their profession cannot, therefore, be left in the hands of the individual pilots. They averred that the grievants' problem was not unique to the respondents because other airlines all over the world, who were using Boeing 707 and 720 had similar problems but settled it through either conversion training to pilots, or monetary assistance by their companies to change profession, or negotiated early retirement package.

On the cost of training the grievants, which would amount to $30,000, or approximately KSh. 2.5 million, the claimants argued that a burden of this nature would be impossible for the grievants to meet.

For the foregoing reasons, the claimants submitted in conclusion that:

- (a) There was no justification at all for the respondents to propose to declare the grievants redundant or redeploy them, but should have trained them as pilots because there were vacancies in the flight crew sector of the airline.

- (b) The respondents acted in bad faith and engaged in unfair labour practice by locking the grievants out and away from their place of work with a view to making them submit to redundancy. Thus, they have wasted away the most useful and productive working life of the grievants as some are now nearing fifty-five (55) years, being retirement age, if they were to become pilots since 1985.

Accordingly, the claimants prayed the court to award that:

- (a) (i) The following three grievants, who are below forty-two (42) years old, be trained as pilots—

S. M. Muhuthia,
J. Munyi,
P. M. Kimani;

- (ii) the training should commence not later than three months from the date of the award; and
- (iii) the full costs of the training should be borne by the respondents.

- (b) For the remaining eleven grievants, viz:

D. Murigo,
B. K. Waweru,
S. Chaudhry,
J. Matatiro,
P. K. Njogah,
J. L. Araka,
R. H. Okello,
P. Kanyagiah,
S. J. Agui,
N. R. Mbugua,
A. J. Ndungu,

the claimants conceded the redundancy, but prayed that each be paid—

- (a) three years' salary as compensation for breach of promise, loss of future income before retirement at the age of fifty-five (55) years; and
- (b) further and other benefits in accordance with the parties' collective agreement, and in particular clause 40 thereof.

In reply, the respondents stated that no training programme to convert the grievants to pilots was started in 1985, and any grievant who might have taken personal initiative to undertake conversion training did so at his own accord. They said, however, that the reason for not going ahead with the conversion training was due to lack of funds because the financial performance of the airline was very poor. The grievants were sent on leave to allow for negotiations between the claimants and the respondents and, in the circumstances, the question of lock-out as alleged by the claimants did not arise. The respondents denied that they gave a promise to the claimants to train the grievants as pilots. They stated that, in the course of modernizing their fleet, a number of options with regard to the future of the grievants were considered. These include: conversion of some grievants to pilots, depending on the availability of funds and taking into account factors such as age, medical fitness, redeploying others to the DC 8-71 aircraft, and offering others ground duties in the Operations and Engineering Departments, subject to qualifications, passing an interview and appropriate retraining, or declaring them redundant in accordance with the terms of the parties' collective agreement in force, but no firm decision was made to convert any of the grievants into pilots because neither internal nor external source of funding was identified. It was, however, inappropriate to spend large sums of money to train the grievants as pilots in view of the worsening financial performance of the airline, the decision of the Government to cancel leases for two out of the original four B. 757 aircraft, the plan to return the DC 8-71 aircraft to the owners, the decline in business because of the Gulf crisis, the recession in the world economy and the unsatisfactory performance of the tourism industry.

On the strength of the air crew, the respondents submitted that they are adequate to operate the existing and projected fleet during the short and medium term. They stated that between 1985 and 1993, the fleet size has been between 10 and 8 aircrafts, and the pilots strength has been between 129 and 89, but presently the airline has 8 aircrafts and cockpit crew of 114. After all, it is the sole discretion of the management to determine the strength of the cockpit crew for the airline, keeping in view the slip patterns, crew needed to operate a particular route structure, adjustments for sickness, leave training and management pilot requirements in conformity with the Operations Manual and Civil Aviation Act, Cap. 394, Laws of Kenya. The respondents stated further that although their pilots have on average 113 days outstanding leave, this is not as a result of a shortage of pilots as alleged by the claimants, but due to temporary shortages of pilots during conversion training in the course of fleet modernization, mainly between 1985 and 1990; the mode of payment of certain allowances (which system has since been replaced) that rewarded extra duty periods with extremely good "overtime" pay, thus encouraging pilots to fly at the expense of taking their normal leave; inefficient use of pilots due to constraints of the fleet agreement and its management; the productive utilization of the claimants' pilots which is lower than is the case for many other comparable airlines, and the refusal by the claimants to meet the respondents' with a view to discussing concrete proposals for clearance of the backlog of leave owed to the pilots. However, consequent upon the retraining of the B757 pilots and the allocation to other fleets, the leave entitlement has returned to normal. They conceded that, although 56 pilots were hired between 1985 and 1993, these were to replace normal retirements and an abnormal level of resignations of many pilots who left to join foreign airlines, particularly during 1989 and 1990. But there is currently world glut of pilots. The respondents maintained that they have sufficient number of air crew and there will be no vacancies for pilot positions in the near future; and even if such vacancies were to arise, the claimants have not proven that they (respondents) are in law obliged to recruit the grievants for such vacancies, as a first option, by converting them into pilots in favour of direct recruitment of pilots from the open market, who are already qualified and "fit to fly". They, therefore, submitted that, in accordance with the structural adjustment programme, the services of the grievants are not required because the jobs for which they were employed no longer exist.

Adverting to the issue at hand, the respondents contended that the terms of the redundancy, under clause 40 of the parties' collective agreement, were comprehensive, attractive and generous to the grievants, and are superior to those laid down in the Regulation of Wages (General) Order. The benefits range between KSh. 1,671,808.9 and KSh. 1,075,315.8, and the total amount expected to be paid to the grievants would be in excess of KSh. 18 million. As regards the demand for a "golden handshake", in addition to the normal redundancy benefits, the respondents asserted that there is no law requiring them to pay. Each grievant has been drawing monthly emoluments of not less than KSh. 50,000 from them (respondents) since February, 1991, and at the same time engaged in other lucrative employment and businesses, i.e. flying operations for their competitors.

The respondents submitted further that the shareholders have been concerned with the airline's dismal financial performance. For example, the last audited accounts for the year 1991/92 show accumulated losses in excess of KSh. 4.1 billion and the draft balance sheet as at 31st March, 1993, indicate that these losses rose to KSh. 8.8 billion. This position continues to worsen with the deterioration in the exchange rate, and the airline has remained as a going concern only because of Government financial backing and ownership. The board of the company has over the last two years initiated many measures to stem the losses of the past years and to enhance performance and image of the concern. These include redundancy of 960 employees in May, 1992; return of the DC. 8-71 aircraft and its replacement with two B757 which are smaller, less expensive and more suitable aircraft thereby saving large sums of money; closure of some unprofitable routes and reduction in frequencies on other routes to save on operational expenses; return of B737 aircraft in April, 1993, and cancellation of delivery of another B737 due in November, 1993, to stem unnecessary outflow of hard currency and improve profitability, and a voluntary severance for staff which has reduced the number by a total of 160 in order to save on payroll costs, at least 40 of whom were from the engineering and ground operations, which areas the grievants would be interested in if jobs were available.

In conclusion, the respondents prayed the court to reject the claimants' demands and award in terms of clause 40 of the parties' collective agreement.

In this dispute, the respondents have sought permission to declare the grievants redundant on account of financial constraints and mechanization and automation of their fleet in February, 1991, when the B.707 and B.720 aircrafts were replaced by A.310-300, B.757-200 and F.50 aircrafts. Hence, the services of the grievants have become obsolete and are no longer required. In August, 1991, the grievants were, therefore, retrenched, but continued to receive their salaries and other allowances to date. The claimants have resisted the redundancy on the ground that the respondents offered to retrain the grievants, who had been rated at 30 per cent, as pilots when they realized in 1985 that the grievants would lose their jobs as a result of the mechanization and automation. They, therefore, accused the respondents of breach of promise, bad faith and unfair labour practice in seeking to declare the grievants redundant.

The issue, therefore, for our decision is whether the respondents are entitled to declare the 14 grievants redundant, and if so what reliefs or benefits are payable to them. Under section 2 of the Trade Disputes Act, Cap. 234, Laws of Kenya, "redundancy" means:—

"the loss of employment, occupation, job or career by involuntary means through no fault of an employee involving termination of employment at the initiative of the employer where the services of an employee are superfluous, and the practices commonly known as abolition of office, job or occupation and loss of employment due to Kenyanization of a business; but it does not include any loss of employment by a domestic servant".

Thus, redundancy simply means involuntary and permanent loss of employment caused by an excess of manpower. The situation can be brought about by many factors, such as change in the method of working, reorganization and technological changes due to economic conditions, etc. Although redundancy moves are generally made by the employer, it is a method of determining the employment contract. However, in many establishments there are agreements on redundancy between the union and management. In the main, agreements stipulate that where redundancy is apprehended in any section of the establishment, the employees have to be informed through the union representatives, so that those to be affected will be told exactly why they, and not the other employees, are being affected; and in all cases of redundancy, the initial burden lies upon the management to prove (i) that the grounds of redundancy exist, (ii) that the employer has acted bona fide, and (iii) that the employer has followed the golden rule of "last come, first go" or "first in, last out".

The reason for which the respondents are seeking to declare the grievants redundant in this case is because of mechanization and automation or technological changes in their fleet, which is said to be of a permanent nature and still in existence.

The grievants were engaged in connection with the B.707 and B.720 aircrafts which have since been withdrawn and replaced by A.310-300, B.757-200 and F.50 aircrafts, and their retention has, therefore, become unnecessary. It is a settled principle of industrial law that an employer has every right to effect retrenchment in the staff if so required by the circumstances and in order to economise a post which has become superfluous. The employer is not bound to retain an employee if his service are no longer required, but this is, however, subject to the condition that there should be genuine need to retrenchment which should not be used as a garb for getting rid of an employee or to victimize him for some reason for which the management could not otherwise take any action in the manner permitted by law.

There is on the record some feeble and futile correspondence between the parties from 1985 on the question of conversion training of the grievants, but no serious attempt was made to enforce the demand and no decisive action was taken by the respondents in regard to this demand. We have heard elaborate arguments from learned and distinguished counsel for the parties and carefully gone through the documentary evidence filed in the case; and, bearing in mind that all commercial undertakings have as their first and most important objective the making of profit as the only guiding path, we think that the demand by the claimants that the respondents should be compelled to retain the grievants as pilots is absolutely untenable and there appears to be no justification for putting such a heavy and colossal financial burden on the respondents, particularly when the airline is struggling to survive.

So far as the first ground hereinabove is concerned, the reasons do exist for declaring the grievants redundant, i.e. mechanization and automation or technological changes. As far as the second ground is concerned, there is nothing on the record to show that the action of the respondents is mala fide or their motive to declare the grievants redundant is to victimize them for trade union activities, or that they have any indirect motive which would raise the presumption of unfair labour practice. During all this period since 1985, the respondents have not taken any step or disciplinary action to victimize the grievants so far, and the latter have continued to earn their salaries and other allowances to date, without rendering any gainful and productive services to the former. Apart from that, the respondents wanted to take the grievants into their confidence by the manner in which they have handled their case for a considerable length of time. All this clearly shows the bona fides of the respondents. So far as the last ground is concerned, it is not one of the grievances of the claimants that the well established principle of "last come, first go" or "first in, last out" has not been observed by the respondents.

The question of appointment, or reduction and retrenchment of employees on the ground of redundancy proportionately to the reduction in the volume of work or owing to rationalization are always within the inherent and fundamental right of the management, and this court has no hand to interfere with the order of discharge of any particular employee on the ground of redundancy, except in colourable exercise of such powers or as a result of victimization or unfair labour practice or caprice. In the present case, the fact that the posts to be abolished are held by professional and experienced employees would not affect the legality of the decision to abolish them as long as the decision is taken in good faith. There is, therefore, no manner of doubt in our minds that there have been technological changes carried out by the respondents for a bona fide purpose of the airline industry, and the redundancy which would result is without any taint of victimization or unfair labour practice. There is nothing in the nature of punishment or vindictiveness involved, and we uphold the intended decision of the respondents to declare the grievants redundant as surplus to requirement, subject to the conditions hereinafter.

The other point for our consideration is the contention by the respondents that this court has no jurisdiction to interfere in the contractual relations between them and the claimants. They asserted that the entitlements to the grievants under clause 40 of the parties' collective agreement are sufficient compensation: and it is not open to this court to extend them, and if it does so it will go against the law of contract between the parties.

The question that immediately arises in this connection, therefore, relates to the jurisdiction of this court to impose new obligations upon the parties. It is now well settled and recognized that the relations between employer and employee are not governed purely by contracts. The contractual relationship between the employer and employee is an exploded theory with Industrial Courts. On account of the impact of new considerations, many of our old ideas must be retranslated, so to speak, into a new language. The democratic idea of freedom, for instance, must lose its 19th Century meaning of individual liberty in the economic sphere and become adjusted to new conceptions of social duties and responsibilities. When a big employer talks about his democratic right to individual freedom, meaning thereby a claim to socially irresponsible control over a huge industrial concern and over the lives of tens of thousands of human beings whom he happens to employ, he is talking in a dying language. Old principles of absolute freedom of contract and the doctrine of laissez faire have yielded place to new principles of social welfare and common good. We are no longer living in the age of laissez faire and the contractual rights and obligations are not only subject to the principles of industrial law but also subject to the principles of social justice which is not based on contractual relations, and is not to be enforced with the principles of contract of service. It is something outside these principles and is invoked to do justice, without a contract to back it. In view of this, it is clear that in the social order that is being evolved in which capital and labour relations are undergoing changes, it is presumptuous to say that employer/employee relationship is governed by the law of contract.

Many, if not all, of the disputes between employers and employees in industrial concerns are not founded on contractual rights and obligations. The essential object of all labour legislations, especially the Trade Disputes Act, is not so much to lay down categorically the mutual rights and liabilities of employers and employees but to provide recourse to a given form of procedure for the settlement of disputes in the interest of the maintenance of peaceful relations between the parties, without apparent conflict such as are likely to interrupt production and entail other dangers.

So far as the general power of this court to impose new obligations upon the parties is concerned, there is no doubt that it is open to the court in appropriate cases to impose new obligations on the parties before it or modify contracts in the interest of industrial peace or give awards which may have the effect of extending existing agreement or making a new one. This, however, does not mean that an Industrial Court can do anything or everything when dealing with a trade dispute, but this power is conditioned by the subject matter with which it is dealing and also by existing industrial law and it would not be open to it, while dealing with a particular matter before it, to overlook the industrial law relating to that matter as laid down by the legislature. A regular court of law proceeds on the footing that no power exists to the courts to make contracts for the parties; and the parties must make their own contracts. The courts reach their limit of power when they enforce contracts which the parties have made. But an Industrial Court is not fettered in any way by these limitations. It may create new obligations or modify existing contracts or agreements in the interest of social justice and industrial peace to protect legitimate trade union activities and to prevent unfair labour practice or victimization.

That being the case, the contention of the respondents on this point is, therefore, untenable and baseless.

For the foregoing discussion and reasons, we do not see any justification of ordering the respondents to retrain the grievants as pilots or train them in service. Accordingly, we allow them to declare the 14 grievants redundant with effect from the date of this award on the following conditions:

- (a) That the grievants be paid all their entitlements up to 5th May, 1994, in accordance with clause 40 of the parties' agreement.
- (b) In addition, each be paid compensation equivalent to one year salary, excluding allowances, for loss of employment.

Before we part with, or take leave of, this dispute, we must place on the record our appreciation to both counsel for their consistent diligence and co-operation, and express our great pleasure that we have derived from the fact that the dispute was fully and ably represented for each side by two of best advocates of this generation, without any over-bearing attitude, pin-pricks or waste of time. Their powers and manner of persuasion were a positive menace to the administration of justice, and we did not regret one hour that was spent on the hearing of the dispute. We are, therefore, thankful to them for the invaluable assistance they rendered to the court.

This is our award and order.

Given at Nairobi, the 6th May, 1994.

Judge.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS TO THE "KENYA GAZETTE"

THE following notes are for the guidance of persons submitting "copy" for inclusion in the Kenya Gazette, Supplement, etc.:

- (1) The Kenya Gazette contains notices of a general nature which do not affect legislation. They are, therefore, submitted to the Government Printer directly.
- (2) Legislative Supplement contains Rules and Regulations which are issued by the central Government. Because of this they must be submitted to the Government Printer through the office of the Attorney-General.
- (3) Bill Supplement contains Bills which are for introduction in the National Assembly.
- (4) Act Supplement contains Acts passed by the National Assembly.

All "copy" submitted for publication should be prepared on one side of an A4 sheet no matter how small the notice or Act, each page being numbered, and should be typewritten with double spacing. Copy should be clear, legible and contain minimum alterations.

Particular attention should be paid to the following points:

- (i) Signature must be clarified by means of rubber-stamping or typing the name of the signatory in capital letters.
- (ii) Dates must be correct and filled in where necessary.
- (iii) Care should be taken to ensure that all headings to notices and references to legislation are up to date and conform with the Revised Edition of the Laws of Kenya

EXTRACT FROM THE CODE OF REGULATIONS, SECTION D—

Kenya Gazette

"D 40. (1) Communications for the Kenya Gazette should reach the Government Printer not later than 9 a.m., on Friday of the week before publication is desired. The Government Printer will not publish communications received after that hour until the next subsequent issue of the Gazette."

(2) Ministries will be required to pay for the Kenya Gazette and to meet the cost of advertising in it.

(3) It will facilitate work at the Press if Permanent Secretaries will forward Gazette notices to the Government Printer in time."

It is emphasized that these notes are for guidance only, but it is requested that persons submitting copy for publication first satisfy themselves that such copy is complete in every respect.
