General project information.—Botswana has a high rate of expatriate senior personnel occupying managerial, administrative and technical posts in all government and private sectors. Efforts to enhance localisation have been made since 1967. However, progress so far has been slow. One important reason for this has to be sought in the limited educational and training facilities in the country.

The Labour Department, under the aegis of the Ministry of home affairs is responsible for the implementation of the localisation and training programme. The Labour Department will be assisted by a manpower planning adviser who will, together with local officers, provide the necessary data on present and forecasted manpower needs in relation to localisation. The fielding of the two advisers will overlap.

The daily subsistence allowance rate is subject to change during the assignment.

Short-term experts and consultants are entitled to 2½ working days' leave per month or the equivalent in cash for leave not taken. They also benefit from social security arrangements under specified conditions.

General project information.—In 1979, the Government conducted a large-scale manpower survey of private and public sector establishments to determine the extent of dependence upon non-Malawians, the magnitude of job vacancies and to forecast the country's needs for the next decade. According to the results of the survey, there was a high percentage of non-Malawians in the professional, technical, administrative and managerial occupations. The level of vacancy rates shown in the 1979 Manpower Survey suggests severe imbalances in certain occupations. Particularly striking were the 25 per cent vacancy rates among administrative and managerial workers in both the private and public sectors.

Serious shortages of skilled manpower continue to exist and would seem to constitute an important impediment to future development. However, in the absence of any update of the 1979 survey, the problem cannot be properly assessed. Furthermore, the Government had decided to give greater priority to the higher education sector. To guide policymakers responsible for higher education, it would be necessary to undertake a manpower study in order to identify priority education and training areas for further investment. The ILO, UNDP and the IBRD are collaborating with the Government Department for Personnel Management and Training in the Office of the President and Cabinet in the execution of the study and in the strengthening of capacity for human resources development planning.

Description of duties.—Under the guidance of the manpower planner, contribute to a comprehensive survey of high and middle-level manpower in both the public and private sectors, with particular attention to agriculture, industry and health and an assessment of training needs of higher and middle-level manpower (including managers) and the adequacy of existing training programmes. On the basis of information so gathered as well as the analysis of supply institutions (contained in the recently completed education plan for 1985-1990) to prepare a realistic investment plan for the sector. More specifically, the statistician/computer specialist will:

- (a) be responsible for supervising the installation and the operation of relevant computer hard software;
- (b) prepare a census of establishments and design a sample frame;
- (c) design and test questionnaires and prepare coding;
- (d) prepare training material and select and train enumerators and assistants;
- (e) assist in the execution of the survey and the processing of the results;
- (f) assist in the analysis and in the reporting on the results, in particular through checks on the consistency of the tables and through tabulations and projections.

Qualifications required.—Graduate degree in statistics or similar field. Wide experience in surveys and computerised data processing.

Language (s).—Thorough knowledge of written and spoken English.

General project information.—The artisanal fisheries sector in the Gambia employs some 5,000 people involved in fishing, processing and local marketing. There are six major landing places on the Atlantic coast and 10-15 of some importance along the river Gambia. In 1985, a feasibility study showed that many of the technical problems of the artisanal fisheries are being addressed by projects supplying equipment, facilities and know-how but that a lack of organisation prevents the fishermen from fully utilising their potential.

Description of duties.—The adviser will assist in the establishment of a limited number of artisanal fishery co-operatives and will help to ensure that they are economically viable and provide benefits to members.

He will work under the general guidance of the ILO Project Manager and in close co-operation with fishermen and officers concerned with the establishment and operations of artisanal fishery co-operatives.

More specifically, the duties of the adviser will be as follows :

5. Based on accepted proposals, the preparation of such plans, systems, manuals and instructions as may be necessary.

6. Any other duties relevant to artisanal fishery co-operatives or assigned by the Project Manager.

Qualification required.—University degree or equivalent experience in relation to business administration, marketing, economics or other relevant field of study. Working experience in relation to small-scale enterprises—preferably related to processing, storage and marketing of fish on a co-operative basis. Experience from developing countries is a definite advantage.
