- i). Description of the method selected and the reasons why it was selected (The pricing methodology adopted, showing how the arm's length price is derived. Also indicate why that method is chosen over other methods and a description of the measures taken to ensure that the measure of profit for taxation purposes is derived from arms length pricing of relevant transactions.

This would include:

- An analysis of the controlled transaction using the five(5) comparability factors as contained in Regulation 4 of the Transfer Pricing Regulations.
- Searches and databases and criteria used in selection of comparables including economic considerations.
- A description of the transactions selected as comparables, including an analysis of those transactions (using the five comparability factors) and an explanation of why the selected comparables are considered sufficiently reliable.
- A description of any comparability adjustments considered appropriate.
- A description of how comparable pricing or margins is applied to the tested transaction.
- Intangible property, the form of the transaction, the type of intangible, the rights to use the intangible that are assigned, and the anticipated benefits from its use; Documentation of assumptions and judgments made in the course of determining an arm's length outcome.
- Documentation of calculations made in applying the selected method and any adjustments made. Assumptions and information regarding factors that influenced the setting of prices or the establishment of any pricing policies for the taxpayer and the related party group as a whole.

- ii). Functional analysis of the risks assumed (including risks such as market risk, financial risk, credit risk, foreign exchange risk, liability risk, assets employed (taking into account consideration of their age, market value, location etc) and functions performed by entity in relation to risks, assets and functions performed by the associated entities that are party to the transaction and the significance of those functions in terms of their frequency, nature and value to the respective parties involved in or related to the transaction.

- iii). Cost Contribution arrangements (CCA) including copies of the CCA agreements and relevant amendments, list of arrangement participants and beneficiaries, extent of use of CCA property by associated parties who are non parties to CCA, duration of CCA, description of the scope of the activities to be undertaken, including any intangible or class of intangibles in existence or intended to be developed, interest of each participant, identification of benefits accruing to each party and any material differences between expectations and actual benefits and all other rights and obligations of each associated enterprise under the CCA, contribution borne by each participant, description of the method used to determine each parties share of the contribution consequences of a participant entering or withdrawing from the agreement.
- iv). Management strategy/policy and/or corporate business plans to the extent they give an insight into the nature of special circumstances under which the taxpayer's business is conducted, for example to enter a new market, increase share in existing market, to introduce new products into market, or to fend off increasing competition, set off transactions, distribution channel selection and management strategies that influenced determination of transfer price.
- v). Where applicable, financial information relevant in comparing profit and loss between associated entities with whom the taxpayer has transactions subject to transfer pricing rules;
- vi). If a comparability analysis results in a range of arms length outcomes, please document all the outcomes. Reasons for choosing that particular arm's length price from the range of outcomes must be documented. If a range is used, documentation supporting the establishment of the range should be evidenced. and
- vii) An explanation of the capital relationship eg. balance and source of debt and equity funding) relevant to the transactions.

When to submit documents:

Documents pertaining to transfer pricing are NOT to be physically submitted with Return Forms, BUT must be in place prior to the due date for filing the Income Tax Return for the relevant year, must be in the English language or translated into the English language, prepared at the time the transfer price is established.
